Spiritual gifts must not be confused with spiritual fruit. All Christians are commanded to develop the fruit in Gal. 5:22, which include love, joy, peace, patience kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness and self control. These are not optional. Every Christian should produce every fruit. The gifts however are given in different measure to different people. God distributes them at His discretion for the benefits of everyone. It is our responsibility to develop them and let God work through us as He chooses. We must never glamorize some gifts or flatter ourselves by thinking ours are more important than others. Nor should we live in false humility by rejecting our own special abilities. (Read 1 Cor. Ch.12)

Some have chosen to show off their gifts and special talents while neglecting to produce fruit. This behavior only disqualifies your Christian service to God. In Matthew Chapter 5, Jesus said, "That if we 'show off' our gifts to get recognition by men, then we will surely loose our reward in heaven." God only allows us to manage His resources for His time and His purposes. We must be thankful for being allowed to share them with others and always give God the credit and the glory.
